

Home Site: <http://toonspirit.net>

Introduction to Philosophy

Exercise: A Little Omniscience Goes a Long Way

By Richie Heinlein

1) God uses the words in question “square circles” for the term “curve ball”, meaning that it keeps us on our toes.

2) In our main language, “reasonable” means “fair”. In this story, “reasonable” means logic or reasoning for doing something. I agree.

3) A lot of things are unrevealed until its season for good reason. If we knew the answers or how things turn out beforehand, then we may not try certain things because of a cost to be paid or something of that nature.

4) Even though an inversion, it is the same statement. There is no significant difference because God’s very nature is perfection and good.

5) They both have equal freedom, but they both act on the very nature of their hearts.

6) Yes and Yes. This is because the two act on the very nature of their hearts. Within that nature, they both have a multitude of choices. I believe they both choose to be and stay within that nature regardless of any inference to that nature perceived.